Mrs. W. R. Brown announced that the nominating committee for the election of officers, which is to be held the first Wednesday in April, will be composed of Mesdannes E. Kohlberg. C. H. Campbell. A. W. Foster and Henry Bowie.

Mrs. Witte announced that the second complimentary music recital of the music department will be given on March 25 in the assembly hall of Hetel Paso del Norte. The program will be in charge of Mrs. W. W. Evans, assisted by Mrs. J. J. Pearce.

The program for the afternoon then followed, and was in charge of Mrs. J. G. McNary.

Mrs. A. F. Sievers gave an interesting talk on the music of the Viennese period, from 1750 to 1800. Mrs. Sievers spoke on the social conditions of music at this time and of the great difficulty the musicians had in presenting their work to the public, "Mozart, a German, wrote most of the best works in Vienna, including the famous operas. The Marriage of Figure' and 'The Magie Finte," she said.

Mrs. W. R. Brown gave a sketch of the life of each composer before the numbers were played or sung.

Mrs. Ciarence D. Johnson played a plano solo, Nocturne by John Fields; Mrs. Bertha C. Stough sang a solo, "Che Faro Fenna Eurydice," and was accompanied by Mrs. W. R. Brown; Mss. Vriginia Bean then played two violin selections, "Andante Cantabile and Gira," by Tarpin, and Nocturne No. 5, by John Fields; Miss Bean was accompanied by Mrs. V. L. Bean; J. G. The Young Girl's "Love" Read This, Fathers and Mothers; Read This, Young Misses; Read This, Young Men. By Dorothy Dix

Y Dear Little Girl: You tell me that you are 17 years old, and that you are thinking of cloping with a young chap who clerks in the haberdashery store that you pass every day, and who has perfectly stunning eyes and wears the swellest clothes.

Whenever you catch a glimpse of him your heart just goes flippety-flop, and you have little chills and fevers.

By these signs and tokens you know that what you feel for him is a deep, unalterable love, the passion of a life-time.

unalterable love, the passion of a lifetime.

And 17 doesn't seem so very young to you. You feel quite—quite old, and very wise, and experienced; and you haven't a doubt that you are perfectly capable of deciding the most important problem of your whole life.

Of course, your mother and father object, and say that you are nothing but a baby, and that there'll be plenty of time to think of love and getting married when you are really grown up.

Most Divorces Fellow Elopement.

Don't do it, little girl. I know you hate figures, but just cast your eye over the cold, hard statistics of divorce, and they will show you that more than 75 percent of the marriages that end in disaster were the result of elopements or where very young people got married.

You think that the feeling you entertain for Percy is love. It is not. It is the dawning of sex consciousness.

Your mother is too modest to talk to you about such things, and that is why you and millions of other little, young, ignorant girls blunder into matrimonial misery. They mistake the flutter that man in general produces in their breasts for love of some par-flutter that man in general proin their breasts for love of some par-ticular individual man. Distrust your emotions, my dear, as you would a emotions, my dear, as you would a band of traitors that were trying to deceive and lure you into slavery.

And don't answer every call that comes along, for fear you will miss saying "yes" to the right one. When he arrives you will hear his voice, through it whispered to you across the ocean.

To get a line on how taste changes at your age just try to recall how crary you were over that pink dress last winter. You thought it the very quint-essence of style, and smartness, and beauty. Now you wouldn't be caught dead in it.

Also recall the way you had your Also recall the way you had your room fixed up with college flags, and photographs of the girls and boys, and dinky little souvenirs, and how perfectly grand you considered it. They went into the diseard after you took that course of art lectures and found out that bare simplifiety was the thing. And do you remember how mad you were over chocolate fudge until you got an overdose of it? Now the very name of fudge given you nauses.

Young Husband May Not Develop.
Believe me, all those disasters, and Believe me, all those disasters, and more, are almost sure to repeat them-selves if you marry when you are 17. Your taste isn't formed in men, any more than it is in books, or food, or

He may stay just what he was when you married him, or he may go backward, and then what are you going to do? Take it from me, little girl, a last year's husband is sometimes harder to put up with than a last year's hat. Consider, also, little girl, that if you marry when you are still a child you deliberately cut yourself out of the only play time of life that the average woman ever has. Her girlhood is the golden hour of a woman's existence. Finally, beloved, don't clope. You may not believe it, but your parents are your best friends. They have nothing at heart but your interest, no desire but for your happiness, and if they are not willing for you to marry, rest assured they have good and sufficient reasons. He may stay just what he was when rest assured they have good of ficient reasons.

Don't elopes Don't sneak off and marry unbeknewn to those who have made so many sacrifices for rot.

Wait until the law makes you responsible for your own actions and gives you a right to do as you please. Then you won't have to elope, and the chances are that you wouldn't look at the youth you once contemplated runters off to marry.
